DETAILED ACTION

1. This action is responsive to communications: Amendment filed 02/12/2004 to the original application filed 01/21/2000; IDS filed 01/29/2004 and 04/13/2004.
2. Claims 1-15 are currently pending in this application. Claims 1, 6 and 11 are independent claims.
3. Please note the Article (IDS filed 04/13/2004) has not been considered since a publication date cannot be determined.

Rejections - 35 USC § 102

4. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for the purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language; or " (Emphasis added.)

Claims 1, 6, and 11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated Prinzing (U.S. 6,592,628 – filed 02/1999).

As to independent claim 1, Prinzing teaches a method for providing prerequisite checking in a system for creating compilations from a plurality of content objects stored in a data repository, each content object comprising a plurality of content entities, some of the content entities being prerequisites to others of the content entities (the content of a document ... content can be text, alphanumeric data, or any other information contained in a document ...stored in a storage area; Abstract), comprising the steps of:

upon addition or removal of a content entity to or from the compilation, determining if the content entity has any prerequisite content entities, and if so, adding or removing the prerequisite content entities (the manipulation of content in the storage area includes inserting content in the content entity, removing content from the content entity ...The information retrieved from the element entities is used to manipulate the content stored in the storage area associated with the content entity; col.2, lines 21-67 & col.3, lines 27-58).

As to independent claim 6, it is directed to a program storage device for implementing the method of claim 1, and is similarly rejected under the same rationale.

As to independent claim 11, it is directed to a system for performing the method of claim 1, and is similarly rejected under the same rationale.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 2-5, 7-10, and 12-15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Prinzing in view of Cousins et al. (U.S. 6,351,752 – filed 07/1998).

As to dependent claim 2, Prinizing does not explicitly teach “one or more of the prerequisites are conditional.”

Cousins teaches one or more of the prerequisites are conditional (col.3, lines 37-49).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention was made to include the feature from Cousins in the system of Prinizing because Cousin teaching would have provided the capability for determining whether the condition is satisfied before generating a rule based on information in an entry.

As to dependent claim 3, Prinizing does not explicitly teach “the conditions for applying a prerequisite are defined in one or more rules.”

Cousins teaches the conditions for applying a prerequisite are defined in one or more rules (col.3, line 37-col.4, line 4).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention was made to include the feature from Cousins in the system of Prinizing because Cousins’ teaching would have provided the capability for determining whether the condition is satisfied before generating a rule based on information in an entry.

As to dependent claim 4, Prinizing does not explicitly teach “in the case of more than one rules pertaining to the same prerequisite, further comprising the step of reducing the rule set if possible into a smaller set of rules.”

Cousins teaches in the case of more than one rules pertaining to the same prerequisite, further comprising the step of reducing the rule set if possible into a smaller set of rules (col.4, lines 5-47).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention was made to include the feature from Cousins in the system of Prinizing because Cousins' teaching would have provided the capability for determining whether the condition is satisfied before generating a rule based on information in an entry.

As to dependent claim 5, Frinzing does not explicitly teach "the step of rewriting any negative rules as positive rules."

Cousins teaches the step of rewriting any negative rules as positive rules (col.4, lines 5-47).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention was made to include the feature from Cousins in the system of Prinizing because Cousins' teaching would have provided the capability for determining whether the condition is satisfied before generating a rule based on information in an entry.

As to dependent claims 7-10 and 11-15, they include the same limitations as in claims 2-5, and are similarly rejected under the same rationale.

Response to Arguments

6. Applicant's arguments filed 02/12/2004 have been considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant argues: "Prinzing does not disclose or suggest that 'some of the content entities being prerequisites to others of the content entities.'" (Remarks, page 10). Also, "Prinzing does not disclose or suggest 'providing prerequisite checking in a system for creating compilations from a plurality of content objects stored in data repository, each content object comprising a plurality of content entities." (Remarks, page 11)

In response to applicant's arguments, the recitation "some of the content entities being prerequisites to others of the content entities" and "providing prerequisite checking in a system for creating compilations from a plurality of content objects stored in data repository, each content object comprising a plurality of content entities" have not been given patentable weight because the recitation occurs in the preamble. A preamble is generally not accorded any patentable weight where it merely recites the purpose of a process or the intended use of a structure, and where the body of the claim does not depend on the preamble for completeness but, instead, the process steps or structural limitations are able to stand alone. See In re Hirao, 535 F.2d 67, 190 USPQ 15 (CCPA 1976) and Kropa v. Robie, 187 F.2d 150, 152, 88 USPQ 478, 481 (CCPA 1951).

Conclusion

7. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
